I Am A Part Of All I Have Met

I am a part of all that I have met
Yet all experience is an arch wherethrough
Gleams that untraveled world whose margin fades
Forever and Forever when I move.

THE 1961 ADYTUM

Listen, we are inviting you. Look on these pages, on pictures printed in the past, recorded in the ever more distant past, some even faded with age. In some places you see only white where the old images have gone completely—and yet haven't they left the ghost of a shape, a space to be filled and incorporated? Now feel, in your right hand, the weight of what is to come, of what you will soon be seeing and accounting for. We dedicate this, our chapter in the Denison history book, to Dr. A. Blair Knapp on his 10th anniversary as our president. Can we say anything comprehensive about this man who was here before we came, who will continue here after we leave? About his image there is the character of a current event into which can be read a past and a future. He is with our trustees and benefactors, who know the chapters of the history book more completely than we ever can. He is with us who are—well—the issues of the moment. And he is with future which we see appearing even now—the skeleton of a new building, the rumored coming of still newer, abler minds.

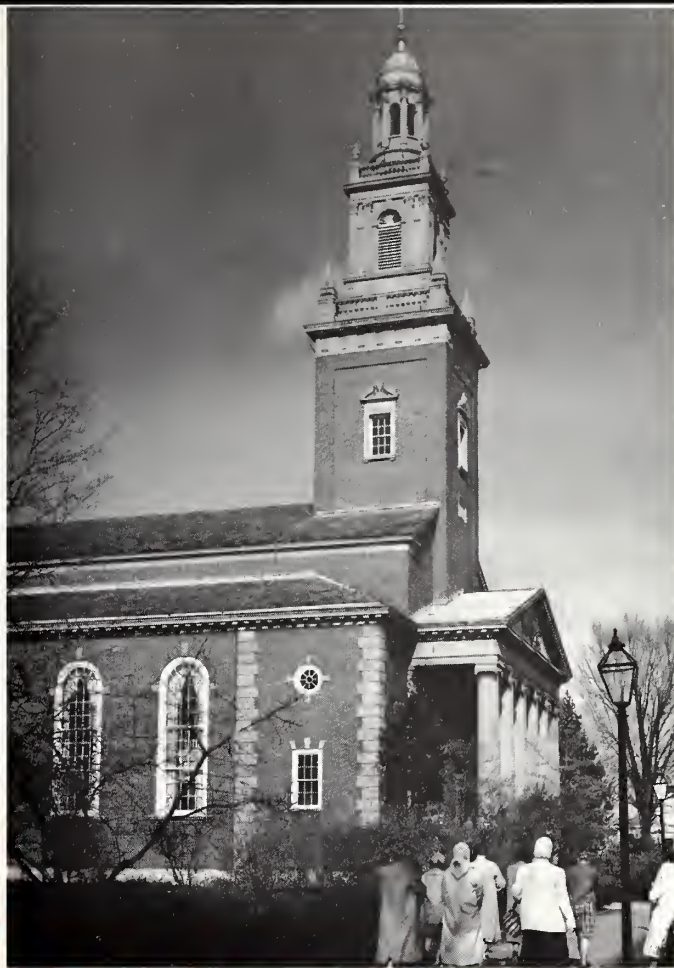

Tennyson rightly said that we are a part of all that we have met. For most of us, our stay at Denison is now and will be perhaps the most important meeting of our lives. Here in the shadows of ivy-covered buildings and tall straight trees we have nurtured friendships that will endure for the remainder of our lives. We, as other generations before us, have trudged afoot up the drag on wintry days, walked with a light step down the many paths in brisk autumn, or strolled leisurely past Swasey chapel, basking in the warm sunshine of late spring. Occasionally we have stopped to consider and contemplate the beauty and serenity that surrounds us, a gift from those of the past to us of the present and to those who will follow our trails through Denison.

It is difficult to say how many careers may have been planned, how many romances plotted, in minds of young persons daydreaming over their books in hidden corners of our library. No doubt the solitude it has provided for exploration, reading, and thinking has caused those who have set high goals for themselves to attain them as a result of their academic perseverance. As is only fitting, the library continues to be the center of Denison's academic life for both professor and student. Classes and laboratories have always given the original impetus to our search for truth and fact, but when their facilities can go no further, we turn to books and the wisdom of the men who wrote them.

Books are the treasured wealth of the world, the fit inheritance of generations and nations.

—Thoreau

Science labs give us the opportunity to learn through experimentation and observation.

During our short time in Granville we have been privileged to have opened before us doors to new knowledge—we had just to knock. Those who had founded our college, realized the great gift they could present to these United States by building an institution to widen man's intellect. Few among these men would have dared foretell the fantastic changes the world would experience within the next century and a half, but their Denison has grown and expanded so that it encompasses and disperses this new knowledge to those who desire to learn. Today's Denisonian gains scientific skill in the laboratory and, through independent study and research on honors projects may himself contribute to the storehouse of academic material.

From these books, the fit inheritance of generations and nations becomes a reality.

Introductory psychology courses begin the year with the examination of responses of pigeons to various stimuli.

Yet all experience is an arch . . .

The union serves as a place to meet friends, talk with faculty members, and play bridge. It remains the favorite place on campus for non-academic meetings.

*We study the smallest

With a background in the past and an eye toward the future, Denison is proud of the part it has played and hopes to continue to play in contributing to the scientific progress of the U. S. Firmly believing that every individual can only be the best citizen possible by being introduced to every field, all Denison students of the past, present, and future have participated and will participate in some type of science program from training rats, collecting rocks, and dissecting frogs to identifying trees and plants. Every afternoon, since the founding of this university, has found many Denison students in the various well-equipped laboratories. Denison is especially proud of the academic and intellectual freedom given to her students for conducting their own experiments and studies, hoping that this will continue to contribute to America's scientific progress.

Future scientist practices opportunity for individual study.

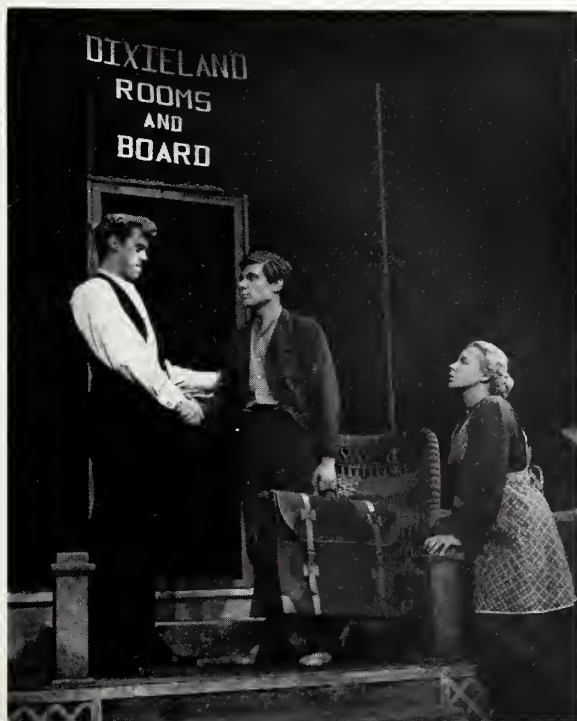

Students are encouraged to work with a minimum of imitation and a maximum of imagination.

This year saw the expansion of the art department into the much needed space provided by the conversion of Burton Hall from a dorm to an academic building. Under the able leadership of Dr. Ketner, Mrs. Campbell, Mr. King and Mr. Smith students learn not only to use their hands but also the meaning of understanding and appreciation. Great men of the past from Michelangelo to Van Gogh become inspiration to budding artists and students whose interests may lie in any area of the arts.

The corner of W. College and N. Mulberry on the lower campus is the home of the University's Theatre Department. Here the department's professors, Mr. Edward A. Wright, Mr. William O. Brasmer, and Mr. Richard G. Smith, work closely with students to further their knowledge in the history, theory, and academic fundamentals of the art of theatre production. Here, too, exists the well known Ace Morgan Studio Theatre, which serves as a laboratory where practical experience can be gained through experimentation in actual theatre production. Six to eight plays are presented every year, under the direction of both professors and students, in which an excellent standard of performance is maintained.

FACULTY and ADMINISTRATION

Dr. A. Blair Knapp President of the University

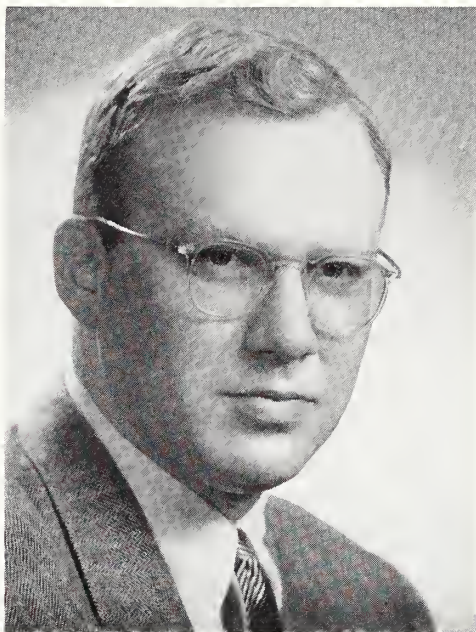

Denison has never been stronger than the ability of those who lead her and has never reached heights higher than the dreams they have worked to make actualities.

From Denison's founding in 1831 it has been blessed with foresighted and capable administrators and faculty whose contributions to the welfare of our college will never be forgotten.

Our present faculty, administrators, and especially our president are carrying Denison's tradition of fine leadership for today and tomorrow.

Dr. Shaw, former president of Denison, aptly expressed Denison's ideal in the first paragraph of his inaugural address. "It will be a self-governing miniature of the society for which education seeks to train our youth. For Education is not training for life, it is Life in training. It will be large enough to escape the dangers of intellectual snobbery, and small enough for personal knowledge and personal contact between student and student, and student and faculty."

Administration

A school cannot be run effectively without an effective administration working together. Each person plays an invaluable part in the smooth operation of Denison University. The admissions office carefully screens applicants and selects only those who will contribute intellectually to our college community. Student services provides counseling services, vocational testing opportunities, and hospital care. The office of public information keeps files on all students and notifies home town newspapers of various honors and activities. The smooth handling of business and finances is also an important segment of the administration. In the library, trained librarians are on duty to provide information and aid to both students and faculty. The men and women working in Doane Administration Building deserve much more credit than they receive because they are hard working people, dedicated to their jobs and to our school.

CLASSES

Freshman Class

The freshmen come to the Denison campus with many questions. What is this school, at which they will spend four years, really like? Will they fit in? How different is a college freshman from a high school senior? What is going to happen during this first year? The class of 1964 found the answers to these and many more questions through their class activities and their introduction to the traditions of our college. They began their first year at Denison by winning the traditional D-Day battle of Racoon Creek, thus being able to put away the frosh beanies. Now, they were truly members of our Denison Community. An active and conscientious class council organized a Christmas Song Fest at Curtis Hall which brought the class together for an evening of caroling and socializing. The freshmen recorded and sold records of the interfraternity Song Contest which was held Mother's Day Weekend. This successful project boosted class spirit as well as the treasury. An open house and dance in the new Crawford Hall marked the end of a wonderful year for a new class.

Sophomore Class

The Sophomores came back to the campus with vim and vigor this fall and started the year off with an energetic Friday afternoon bowling party at the Park Lanes Bowling Alley. Despite a few blisters and bruised backsides they were ready to tackle their class responsibilities with their usual enthusiasm. Preparations for the spring May Day program were begun. The Sophomores handled the plans for the Mother's Day Weekend celebration with a fresh approach and this was a different May Day than Denison had seen in the past. Refreshing orchestral, choral and dance compositions, performed by Denison students, were included in the lengthened program which was specifically planned to be held in the Livingston Gymnasium. The lovely freshman women and the spic and span flower bearers added to the morning's enjoyment and this sophomore project was very successful. The spring semester was a hectic one for the second year collegiates but they still had enough energy for one final bang up open house in Deeds on Class Council day that included hepped up rock 'n roll in Huffman to the tune of the "Triumphs". The Sophomores may have been slightly worn afterwards but they will undoubtedly return in the fall with renewed enthusiasm for the responsibilities of their junior year.

Junior Class

Becoming upperclassmen meant many different things to the class of '62. It meant added responsibilities above all else, but the junior class followed through each of their endeavors completely and effectively. The busy year began with the organizing of the annual Dad's Day Program in October. Following this the juniors began plans for the traditional Junior Prom held in Livingston Gymnasium on May 19th. The prom featured Count Basie and his orchestra playing an evening of "Basie in Blue". The highlight of the evening was the announcing of the 1961 Junior Prom Queen. Topping off the year was the junior class day party which, in the tradition of all Denison's outdoor parties, was rained on, but not rained out. The festivities at Dawes' Aboretum continued in spite of the bad weather. This was also a big year for academic honors within the junior class. Many juniors sported brightly colored crossed ribbons on their shoulders in the spring, symbolizing the many honorary societies on campus. In the spring, the junior class moved into the major campus governmental offices as well as the offices in their fraternities and sororities. The class of 1962 is a strong class, easily assuming leadership and all the responsibilities that come with it. They are a class fully prepared to become Seniors.

Senior Class

"Four years ago they came, raw material to be moulded by skilled hands into men and women with the qualifications needed for leadership. Now they are ready to go out. We who will follow wish them God-speed and the success which is their birthright as children of Denison". (Adytum, 1931) The class of 1961 planned and carried out a successful homecoming using the theme "national advertising" as the basis for sorority house decorations and fraternity floats. Senior revolt day was ushered in at 6:30 one spring evening in May by the chapel bells ringing out "Pomp and Circumstance". We underclassmen who have made close friends within the senior class will miss them and never forget the fun we had while they were still a part of our Denison community. And so we, the classes of '62, '63, and '64 wish our friends in the class of 1961 all the success that they deserve when graduating from the college on the hill.

CAMPUS LIFE

Homecoming

Before our university observed a homecoming celebration the strong fraternal organizations at Denison had held reunions each fall for their members. In response to a growing concern about fraternity loyalty becoming stronger than Denison loyalty, the fraternity alumni met and decided to make the fall anniversary a general homecoming for all old grads. On November 13, 1915, Denison celebrated its first homecoming.

Homecoming 1960 was a sparkling success for the present student body and an opportunity for past students to have their pride in Denison greatly renewed in viewing the newly activated school spirit demonstrated by the roaring crowd attending the game.

D-Day

"Hold that tiger . . ." for many years the sound of the chapel bells playing Tiger Rag has been the signal for "D-Day". In the fall, the freshman-sophomore tug of war is held across Racoon Creek. This year, as in the past, the tug included men and women of all the classes being pushed, pulled, and dunked in the stream. But it was another victory for the frosh which meant the shedding of the beanies, some of which were last seen floating down the muddy creek while others were kept as cherished mementos of Denison. Brunch on the quad, a picnic supper in the evening and dancing until midnight make up a wonderful D-Day.

No one is safe—especially if you happen to be a girl.

In 1942, a program known as the Week of Prayer, changed its name to Religious Emphasis Week. The program underwent another change in name in 1946 to Christian Emphasis Days. In 1952 two speakers, one in the fall and another in the spring were brought on campus for three day programs of chapel, convocations and group discussions. In 1960, the name was changed to Life in Focus Days, recognizing a shift in the program from a religious service to a close examination of too often unexamined areas of everyday life. Fall Life in Focus was concerned with business ethics. Spring Life in Focus dealt with the contemporary Church, mass culture, and personal involvement in social problems.

Co-chairmen Mary Jane LeVan and Jim Fogel.

This year, the Adytum staff announces that the 1961 Adytum Queen is Pat Sanborn. Pat is a freshman Tri-Delt from Smyrna, Georgia and obviously quite an asset to the campus. Karen Gustafson, junior Alpha Phi from Evanston, Illinois, and Jane Davis, senior Kappa from Garfield Heights, Ohio, were selected as runners-up. The queen and her attendants were chosen from photographs submitted by each sorority and the Independent Women's Association to Count Basie during his appearance at Denison in May. The Count took great care in making his decision and the Adytum staff is very pleased with his choice.

Commencement

A college diploma means more than a piece of paper. Into that piece of paper has gone sixteen years of education. Into those years of education have gone hard work, tears, money, fun and midnight oil. This year 265 men and women receive their diplomas from Denison University. The years have brought them this far and only the years to come will show what that piece of paper, called a diploma, has meant to them.

Student-Faculty Council

A sphere of joint action, illustrating the Denison concept of community government, is carried on between the student body and the faculty through our Student-Faculty Executive Council. This body is composed of the seven members of the Faculty Executive committee, the seven members of the Student Senate Executive committee, and a member at large from the Student Senate. This council discusses problems of common concern to students, faculty, and administration and in turn makes recommendations to the faculty and the student legislative bodies.

Student Senate

The management of student affairs for almost three quarters of a century was under close supervision of the president or of persons designated by him to proctor student activities and enforce the codes of personal conduct. As the president gave more responsibility to the faculty in these matters the Dean came into existence. Finally in 1921 the Board of Trustees granted the charter authorizing the establishment of student self-government which has developed into the fine institution we know today. The DCGA Student Senate, as the legislative branch of our student government, acts as a sounding board for student opinion and is the official voice of the student body. Senate is composed of one freshman and two upperclassmen from each recognized social organization. It is the duty of each Senator to represent the opinions of his social organization and to vote in accordance.

Women's Judicial Council

When the girls of Shepardson College were considered strong enough to govern themselves, their conduct was vested in a Student Government Association. In 1928 the judicial branch of women's government was organized in order to simplify the workings of its governmental processes. Today this council is composed of one elected representative from each of the sororities and independent groups on campus, besides a chairman elected by the women students. The Council receives persons who have committed serious violations against Denison's campus rules and also acts as a discussion and advisory group.

Men's Judicial Council makes up the men's judicial department of the Denison Campus Government Association. The Council is composed of an elected chairman, a court attorney and the vice presidents of each men's social organization. This body discusses, takes and enforces actions regarding violations by men students. The Council may deviate from the general actions if more personalized handling would seem to better serve the needs and behavior of the students involved. Men's Judicial Council was headed this year by Chairman, John Stewart; Court attorney, Robert Rinehart; and Secretary, Richard Needham.

Women's Council

Women's Council is the supreme governing body for women students at Denison. This Council, composed of the President and Vice President of each women's living unit and an elected President and Vice President, coordinates women's activities, formulates dormitory policy, and helps to set standards for women on the campus as a whole. In striving to promote better understanding and cooperation among all student organizations, Women's Council seeks to uphold the legitimate rights of each group operating on our campus.

These young men and women reside for a full year in the freshmen dormitories in order to counsel, advise, and be of any help they can in solving problems for their advisees. Denison is most grateful to these student advisors for the valuable service they render by orienting the freshmen to campus life.

Panhellenic Council

The Denison Panhellenic Council is a part of the National Panhellenic in which each of our sororities is nationally represented. At Denison this organization is composed of one elected representative, the president and an alumna member from each social group. Not only does the Council direct all phases of rushing, but it is vitally concerned with mutual sorority and campus problems. The cooperation and understanding developed between the social groups has made the sorority system at Denison a vital part of the campus.

Interfraternity Council

The National Interfraternity Conference was established on November 27, 1909 at the University of New York City. Denison's Interfraternity Council consists of the Presidents and Vice President of DCGA, and the President and one representative from each fraternity, and the Dean of Men. Since 1920 this group has sought to promote interfraternity spirit and cooperation and to maintain pleasant relations between the fraternities and Denison as a whole. This year IFC has taken steps also to improve its members relationship with the citizens of Granville by aiding in such projects as "getting out the vote" and in general emphasizing the positive points of fraternities.

Phi Beta Kappa

The National Fraternity of Phi Beta Kappa was founded in 1776. During the academic year 1910 to 1911—exactly fifty years ago—the Denison chapter, Theta of Ohio, was established. Theta's charter was granted on September 14, 1910 by the Triennial Council meeting in New York and official installation ceremonies took place on January 18, 1911 in Granville. Denison's chapter of this organization which recognizes scholastic excellence has always worked closely with the national organization. Theta of Ohio's most notable distinction was in 1926 when it founded Phi Society which now has chapters in many other institutions. Of the original Charter and Foundation members, two survive today, Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, internationally famous scholar who is now retired and living in California, and Dr. Willis A. Chamberlin, Granville resident and Professor Emeritus of Denison who has the distinction of having participated in all the fifty years of Theta's existence.

Phi Society

This honorary, recognizing outstanding scholastic ability in freshman students has been a part of the academic world since 1926 when it was first established on Denison's campus. The students so honored are invited to a banquet at the beginning of the first semester where they are formally initiated into Phi Society and receive a Phi pin—the first letter on the way to Phi Beta Kappa. It is hoped that this Phi will inspire them to persevere and succeed in their academic endeavors during their final three years at Denison.

Mortar Board

In 1918 four colleges, Swarthmore College, Cornell University, Ohio State University and the University of Michigan, founded Mortar Board to honor senior women excelling in service, leadership and scholarship. At Denison a senior women's honorary was founded April 11, 1921 under the name "White Nun." The White Nuns were first recognized by wearing white ribbons about their left arms and attending Chapel together. In 1927 Cap and Gown replaced White Nun. On March 28, 1938, our chapter was officially accepted and installed into Mortar Board with the Cincinnati and Ohio Wesleyan Chapters assisting in the installation. Since that time the entire campus has recognized the honor given a woman when she receives a black tassel to hang from her shoulder.

Denisonian

The Denisonian, a student-published weekly newspaper, was first established in 1857 as a literary journal. From 1867-1892, the Calliopean Society took over the publication of the bi-weekly publication under the title of "The Collegian." The Denisonian became a private enterprise "The Denison Exponent" in 1892. In 1894, a combined "Exponent" and "Collegian" was published weekly. The form of the newspaper was adopted in 1896. After the year 1910—"The editorial voice was sometimes melted, but the general tone of the paper was conservatively critical." (p. 290, G. Wallace Chessman, Denison The Story of an Ohio College)

Today the Denisonian is the voice of the Denison student body. It is the policy of the paper to report all the campus news including sports events and social events. The paper also provides a means of expressing student opinion through editorials and open letters. The staff of the Denisonian worked hard this year to please the students. Deadlines which cause many to shy away from newspaper work drew this staff to their jobs. The pounding of typewriters echoes through the upper rooms of Talbot West. With each publication of the Denisonian, all their time and effort is rewarded.

Adytum

As Denison has changed and developed the Adytum, too, has undergone revision and enlargement. Since the first volume was published in the early eighties, the Adytum has had as its object the portrayal of life at Denison. The word "Adytum" means a place for hidden and mysterious things and it is our hope that this yearbook will provide a treasure chest of hidden memories for you in years to come. This year, as every year, the editors and their staffs have spent many hours of diligent work to produce a yearbook worthy of Denison University. In spite of the harried moments, the rush to meet deadlines, the search for that missing photograph, the 1960-61 Adytum in its completed state made all the effort appear worth while. We hope that it represents the truest and best aspects of our Denison, those we all wish to remember.

Exile

Ever since its first publication in 1954, Exile has continued to grow in its intellectual appeal. Clark Blaise, a 1961 editor has stated that the magazine has twin responsibilities: to writers and to readers. It recognizes the importance of encouraging writers, but also recognizes the need to exercise a realistic editorial responsibility. To the readers, Exile maintains a policy of publishing the finest finished work of their fellow students. The editors of the magazine feel that "only when a writer is published at his best and read at his best has the magazine lived up to its purpose." Dr. Consolo is the faculty advisor for the group.

Outlook

Outlook, the literary journal of DCA, is the oldest literary journal on campus. It was founded at Denison in 1948 under the title Deni-Scope and by 1951 this journal was issued 16 times per year. In 1956, Deni-Scope became Outlook, a journal of greatly increased capacity which was published 8 times per year. Today the purpose of Outlook is to provide a sounding-board for student ideas and opinions on recent issues, problems and interests, both on campus and off. Under the direction of its recent editors, Outlook has become DCA's journal of ideas, news and opinion in which the Christian perspective finds expression in analytical and creative writing by students and faculty.

Radio

Denison's student owned and operated station WDUB broadcasts on an AM frequency of 540 kilocycles, bringing to students a variety of listening pleasures. Classical as well as current musical selections provide background for both studying and relaxation. Staff members, including news announcers, disc jockeys, and librarians, devote their services to the station. In an attempt to enlarge its facilities for Denison students WDUB will begin operating on FM frequency next fall.

Theatre

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines theatre as "an edifice for dramatic performances" or "the drama". The drama is a great part of the cultural life at Denison and audiences are always sure of an excellent performance under the direction of Mr. Brasmer, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Wright. Many students begin a career in the theatre here and go on to professional careers.

The Denison Summer Theatre draws talent from all over the country and is considered one of the finest student summer theatres today.

Wingless Angels

An old and unique tradition of the Denison campus is the mysterious and anonymous group called the Wingless Angels. Founded in 1905, the Wingless Angels are dedicated to "the righting of the wrongs of Denison". Membership is secret, names of members being inscribed in the Book of Lost Wings during initiation, as they have been for the last 56 years.

Known to most of the student body only by their white cloaks, cunning pranks, and distinguished mark, these "Angels" have kept Denisonians guessing their identity for years and will continue to do so as long as Denison exists. Operating mostly at night, the Denison student body awakens and discovers their mischievous deeds identifiable by the W these pranksters leave behind.

Theta Eta Chi

Theta Eta Chi

Theta Eta Chi, Senior Men's Social Honorary, was founded in 1951. It was originally a literary society to enhance faculty-student relationships. To every meeting, which was held at the local tavern, the group would invite one faculty representative, with whom they would discuss current events and other topics of interest. Over the years it became quite apparent that the faculty members were all "short hitters". Due to this crisis, it was resolved that no faculty member would be invited to future meetings. Theta Eta Chi now includes members representing eight national Greek fraternities whose purpose is to provide relaxation and a true feeling of brotherhood within the rigorous academic schedule at Denison.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Our fraternity had its awesome beginnings at the University of Alabama on March 9, 1856. Eight students convened in a dark, dingy room and planned the purpose and organization of our group. On January 9, 1858, the university banned Greek brotherhoods. Seeking a vent for our ill will, we entered the Civil War and promptly lost. We were undaunted. Through a series of spectacular efforts, the fraternity began to grow until 1919. That was a big year for us. We were jubilant because a group of Denison students convened in another dark, dingy room to christen the newly chartered Ohio Mu of SAE. At present SAE sports the largest fraternity membership in the world, over 112,000 men . . . all overweight

Coach Seager looks to his bench for support against the rugged Wolverines.

Big Red Wing B. J. Clark tries a head shot in the Michigan contest.

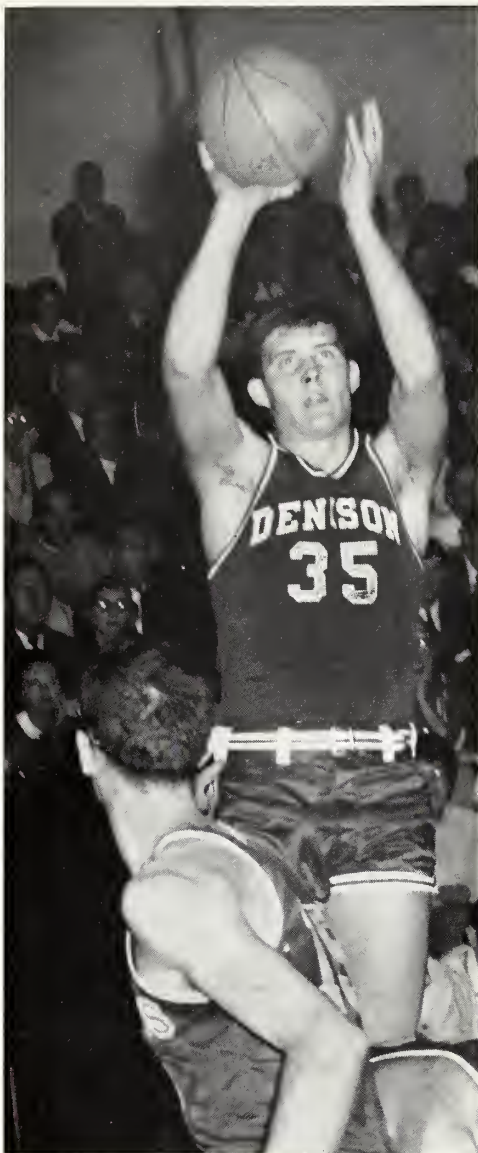

1961 marked the final year at the helm of the Big Red soccer team for Coach Bob Seager, who left Denison to take a post at the United States Naval Academy. Seager came to Denison in 1949 as an instructor in the history department. Always an avid Big Red sports fan, he became a member of the Athletic committee in 1955, and when Tris Coffin vacated the head soccer spot in 1958, Seager was named to replace him. Seager readily admitted that his knowledge of soccer was limited, but armed with a few books on the sport, and the spark of enthusiasm that won him the respect and confidence of his entire squad, the young coach led Denison to its best season ever in 1958. The Big Red rolled up a 6-2-1 mark, tops in the university's seven year soccer history. Seager went on winning soccer games and gaining the admiration of his fellow coaches. In 1959 he was named to the Publicity Committee of the National Soccer Coaches Association of America and the Ethics Committee of the Ohio Soccer Coaches Association. In three years, Seager had a remarkable record of 20 wins, 10 losses, and 4 ties. Over a decade of Denison students will remember him as a colorful, enthusiastic teacher of history, but those who knew him best will remember him as "Coach Seager."

Denison's Harry Moore and Michigan's Mich Oprea try "Zombie Jamboree" step in scrambling for the ball.
